Product Description

Fusible Interfacing Medium Weight Iron-On Non-Woven Fabric Interfacing

Non-woven interlining refers to a type of fabric material that is commonly used in garment construction and various other applications. Unlike woven interlining, which is created by weaving fibers together, non-woven interlining is made by bonding or fusing fibers together using heat, pressure, or adhesive techniques. This results in a fabric that does not have a traditional woven structure.

Parameter	Description
Material	The type of non-woven fibers used in the interlining (e.g., polyester, polypropylene)
Weight	The weight of the non-woven interlining, measured in grams per square meter (gsm)
Construction	The manufacturing process or technique used to create the non-woven fabric
Thickness	The thickness of the non-woven interlining, often measured in millimeters
Density	The level of compactness or density of the non-woven fabric
Fusibility	Indicates whether the non-woven interlining is fusible or non-fusible
Width	The width of the non-woven interlining fabric, usually measured in inches or centimeters
Color	The color or shade of the non-woven interlining fabric, if applicable
Application	The recommended use or application of the non-woven interlining (e.g., for garment construction, crafts)
